AIRPLANE TO PICK UP 3 POUCHES

Mail From Frankfort, Mokena and New Lenox Will Go By Air

Next Thursday, May 19th three local communities, Frankfort, Mokena and New Lenox will participate in the national observance of air mail week. An important and highly interesting as well as history making event of the local observance of this week will be the transportation of mail from the three communities by airplane.

At 4:30 p. m. daylight saving time an airplane will land in a field across from the C. H. Warning farm on Lincoln Highway. Outgoing mail bags from the postoffices of the three communities mentioned will be placed aboard the plane. The plane will fly to Joliet to pick up additional mail and will then proceed to Chicago.

Each post office will use a special cachet stamp. The one used by the Mokena postoffice will show an Indian head, indicating that the town bears an Indian name.

Any one wishing to mail a letter for this special occasion can do so by mailing it that day. All mail to be flown by plane must be in the postoffices named no later than 4 p. m., May 19th.

The public is most cordially invited to witness this history making event.

National Air Mail Week, May 15 objective is to turn definitely the attention of the American people to this service, to give them a broader understanding of its value, to arouse in them a deserved appreciation of its already great and still increasing contribution to the national progress.

Tinley P. O. Will Sell Air Mail Stamp

This stamp will be placed on sale on May 14th at Dayton, Ohio, the home of the Wright Brothers, builders of the first successful airplane and at St. Petersburg, Florida, where the first passenger flight was made. It will be on sale at the Tinley Park post office on May 16th.

The postal department at Tinley Park is sponsoring a cachet in commemoration of National Air Mail Week. The cachet is symbolic of Tinley Park's growth and enthusiasm, showing a picture of a rooster crowing the Tinley Park slogan: "Prosperity Center. We advance."

Parade To Feature Orland Observance Of Air Mail Week

National Air Mail Week will be celebrated in Orland Park next Thursday, May 19. The mail will be brought to Orland by way of an airplane which will land in Daniel's field at Kean and 143rd St. A parade beginning at the Orland Park postoffice will meet the plane to receive incoming mail and to dispatch Chicago bound mail. Pure Milk Asso., Announces A Lower Price

Officials of the Pure Milk Association have announced, effective as of May 6, 1938, a reduced price for fluid milk delivered by its producer members.

The premium over condensery is reduced effective May 6, 1938, from 65c to 35c over the average monthly condensery code price for all base milk.

The high peg price of $1.60 for condensed and the low peg price of $1.40 for condensed in the previous agreement has been eliminated.

Therefore using the new premium of 53c over the average monthly condensed price, based on actual condensed price today which is $1.21 will make a milk price on today's condensery basis of $1.74 per 100 (46 1/2 qts.) for base milk delivered to country plants, platforms or loading stations which is a reduction on the basis of today's market of 31c per hundred.

Based on these figures, it represents a saving to the distributors of about two-thirds of a cent per quart. And, according to press releases and bulletins of individual distributors today, it indicates that the dealers are passing this saving on to the consumers through a reduction in the retail price.

To make the program of the glee club complete, the men's quartet, which performed here in February and soloist Edward Schlundt will sing special numbers. Topping the list of individual performers, however, is director Hille at the organ and piano.

In 1937 Hille, who graduated from Elmhurst in 1929, made his New York debut in Steinway Hall. After a very successful series of concert engagements, he was urged to extend his visit. He decided to return to his post at Elmhurst, which he has held since 1934.

Both Hille and the glee club received rousing ovations at all stops on their Spring tour. This year's tour included concerts at Louisville, Ky., and Evansville, Ind. Capacity audiences, some numbering nearly one thousand people, attended all of the concerts.

Since their concert tour, the glee club members have been presenting concerts in the Elmhurst vicinity and have been preparing for their gala Spring concert at the college. The Mokena concert, coming immediately after the program at the school to be held May 19, will find the singers in their best condition of the year.

Mokena PTA Plans Busy Summer

The Mokena PTA is very busy planning a program to keep the youngsters of this community busy and happy during the summer. They feel that there is a great need for some wholesome entertainment and recreation for our children since there is so little with which to keep them occupied during the long summer vacation. The PTA has been successful in contacting highly recommended young people of Joliet to conduct such activity for the children. It is planned to employ a kindergarten teacher for the children from 4 to 8 years of age, dividing them to a forenoon and afternoon group.

There is also to be a Boy Scout leader, who will teach the boys from 8 to 12 years, all the wholesome activities of a Boy Scout, including manual training. The boys will have a great time, hiking, outdoor cooking, collecting butterflies, studying nature in an interesting manner, making bird houses, tool boxes, model airplanes etc.

Some similar activity is planned for the girls between 8 and 12 years including some sewing and all the things a Camp Fire girl enjoys. It is sincerely hoped that all parents of this community will realize the wonderful opportunity and the contentment such a program will bring our children, and how much happier both parents and children will be when their interest is stimulated in something worthwhile.

These programs are planned for the hours of 9 a. m. to 4 p. m. for two days of each week, during June and July. There is just one more meeting of the PTA at which this question can be discussed and decided, so please do not fail to be present at the next meeting on Tuesday May 24, at 7:45 p. m. DST, and give your cooperation for a happy glorious summer for the children.

He became ill on February 21.

Gradually growing weaker upon his return with his wife from the south on Sunday, April 3, his condition took a sudden turn for the worse at 2 a. m. Saturday. Immediate members of the family were at the bedside at the time of his death.

John H. Volp

Husbands Become 'Golf Widowers'

As Ladies Commandeer the Links

GONE are the days when Mother kept dinner waiting for her golfing husband. Nowadays Father must shift for himself, because American women golfers have become almost as numerous as men. Enthusiastic professional teachers are now devoting more than half their time to teaching women the ancient Scotch game of "pasture pool."

A comparatively recent development, golfing for women addicts because it's good reducing exercise. Doctors encourage it, and wives have found golf a convenient mutual hobby to share with their husbands. Today, most American country clubs set aside special days for women golfers, and numerous are the social activities built around the club house.

Except during the war years of 1917 and 1918, a National Women's Amateur tournament has been held annually since 1903. Most of the current leaders (some of whom are pictured below) can outplay the average male golfer. Helen Hicks, now on the Wilson advisory staff, shows in the accompanying motion pictures how she has perfected remarkable form in driving (left) and putting (right). If you're a golfer, these action pictures may offer some suggestions.

Glenna Collett Vare (above) is the Bobby Jones of women's golf. She has been national champion six times since 1922; the last time was 1935.

Helen Hicks first won national honors in 1931 and has been a top-flight contender in tournament play ever since.

Above: June Beebe, one of the current crop. Right: Pamela Barton, who won the United States women's amateur championship and the British women's open title in 1936, a record that has not yet been tied.

Mrs. Opal S. Hill, once an invalid, is three-time winner of the Western amateur title.

Patty Berg of Minneapolis, 18, has never won a national championship but most likely will some day. She is one of the most promising members of the younger crop and has given old-time golfers hard competition.

In 1927, when Bobby Jones and Tommy Armour were at their peak, the national women's champion was Mrs. Miriam Horn. She held the honor only one year, another victim of Glenna Collett Vare.

In 1932 Virginia Van Wie won her first American title after dogging Glenna Collett Vare's trail for five years. Miss Van Wie kept the title until 1935.

Mary K. Browne, long since out of the national picture, was at her peak in 1924 after she deserted tennis (in which she was national champion) for the golf links.

AMERICA NEEDS MORE AND BETTER PLUMBING

MANY HOMES LACK SANITATION

Prepare yourself for a shock! Recently a U. S. Real Property Inventory revealed that half the homes in some of our leading cities are without showers or tubs! Half of the homes without even water closets!

America is looked upon as the land where every family has a bathroom, an automobile and a radio. Hence it is an astounding revelation to learn that modern plumbing facilities are lacking in half the homes in many of our proud cities.

Only Part of the Story

While the figures of the inventory, made by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, show a surprising need for plumbing, this is only part of the story. In this survey every home with plumbing is counted as having modern plumbing — no matter how old, or dilapidated it may be!

A condition such as this is a double menace. For in many homes, old, worn-out fixtures are still in use giving home owners a false sense of security while actual danger may lurk in the form of disease and contagion.

Safeguard Your Family

There is only one way to be certain that the plumbing in your home is really a protection and not a menace to your family health — ask your Master Plumber to inspect it and advise you on the real conditions of all piping, fixtures and fittings.

MODERNIZE ON FHA Approved Terms

You can have "Standard" Plumbing Fixtures (including installing)—without down payment, and pay the complete cost in monthly payments, taking three years if necessary, as long as you pay a minimum of $10 per month.

No red tape—no credit investigations—no mortgages—no co-makers required. Your Master Plumber takes care of all details.

Good Plumbing Protects Family Health

Protect Your Priceless Possession!

In the ruddy cheeks of youngsters . . . in the sparkling eyes of youth . . . in the strength of manhood and in serenity of old age, good health is reflected. It is a blessing that is the very motive of life—it propels all progress, inspires all inspirations. Without it life becomes a burden, a futile gesture—and more costly as well. You should take every step possible to safeguard your health—to protect it by precaution.

Plumbing Protects Health

Today more than ever before, science and engineering are aiding the public to protect its health. Leading Medical Authorities and Health Officers agree that most important to the protection of public health is good plumbing. It supplies the fresh, pure water so essential to well-being and carries away waste dangerous to good health.

Needs Skilled Workmanship

Good plumbing is so important to good health that it should be entrusted only to those best qualified by training and experience to insure the skilled workmanship that protects health—the Master Plumbers.

Their long years of experience, their high qualifications established by state and municipal examinations, their knowledge of sanitary requirements and their deep interest in health protection are assurance that the best interests of the public are served by calling upon Master Plumbers for all plumbing service.

NEW U. S. FINANCE PLAN MAKES IT EASY TO BUILD OR MODERNIZE HOMES

You don't have to wish any longer for that new home or dream about the day when you can have the modern plumbing your home needs so badly. Under the new housing act, directed by the Federal Housing Administration, your government has made it possible for you to obtain the lowest financing rates in history for building a new home or modernizing your present home. Now you can make those dreams come true!

Just think of it! You can have that new bathroom, that new downstairs powder room, that modern kitchen, without down payment and take several years to pay the complete cost in small monthly payments. You can have as much as $10,000 for modernizing and repairing your property and repay the cost out of income.

Your Master Plumber can help you plan the modern plumbing your home needs, explain the easy way you can pay for it. He can tell you the simple steps to take in getting modern plumbing for your home.

Modern Comfort at Low Cost

Back of this new government approved plan of making it possible for you and your family to enjoy new comforts, new conveniences and a new freedom, is the realization that the building of new homes and the modernizing of old ones will return big dividends to your family in contentment and health protection. America needs new homes, better homes, homes that eliminate needless upkeep costs, reduce the labor of maintenance and safeguard the family health.

Never before has it been possible for American families to enjoy so many time and labor saving devices and have the protection of such durable construction and equipment and get more real value for the money spent on their homes than today. Almost every family now can live in a modern, comfortable home and pay the cost in convenient monthly payments.

This new government plan of financing home construction and modernization makes it possible for you to have that extra bathroom, that modern kitchen or the new plumbing fixtures you need and pay the complete cost in small monthly payments spread over a long period of time. Ask your Master Plumber to give you complete details of how you can take advantage of this opportunity to have a really modern home.

BATHROOMS LIKE THESE CAN BE

COLORED FIXTURES ADD NEW CHARM

Today, as never before, color is definitely an important factor in the designing of a bathroom. With the introduction of colored plumbing fixtures, innumerable possibilities for attractive and unusual bathrooms have been revealed. Color can express numerous things—the personality of a person, a mood or artistic ability. It often means the light and life—the charm of the room.

It is not difficult for a woman to decide upon the style and color of the ensemble she is to wear: in like manner the decision of the effect she wants created in her bathroom should not be difficult.

Sanitation and practicability are the two foremost factors. The next important thing is the exposure of the room. Through the use of warm colors, the absence of sunlight can be compensated. The walls should contrast with the fixtures and provide pleasing background for them. It is essential that they do not dominate the room, but serve to offset the more prominent colors of the fixtures. The floor covering must be the heaviest color used and the ceiling the lightest color.

The draperies, shower curtains, towels and rugs can be compared to the accessories of a woman's dress. They provide the bright spots of the room. This is the place to use vivid tone, harmonizing of course, with the rest of the design. If the walls are neutral, these colors can be changed from time to time.

The important factor to remember throughout, is the effect that one wishes to create; and there is no better medium for this than color. What is more impressive than the femininity of Rose, the youthfulness of Persian Brown, the dignity and theatrical effects of black and white? The field of color in bathrooms is vast and each year shows only more clearly the advantages and charm of color used correctly.

SMART NEW STYLES AND TRENDS IN HOME MODERNIZATION

MODERN BATHROOM FIXTURES COST LESS THAN A GOOD USED AUTOMOBILE

The Following Interesting Episode May Be Your Experience, Too.

Recently a Master Plumber was called in to do some minor repair work in the home of one of his customers.

After the job was finished the conversation turned to new fixtures which the homeowner admitted he would like to get.

"But," he said knowingly, "new plumbing fixtures are a luxury few can afford today. Sure, we need them—my wife's continually yelling for one of those new-fangled square tubs and everything else, but it's all way over my budget. Why I couldn't possibly spend so much money!"

"Hold on, Mr. Smith," said the plumber. "You evidently think new fixtures cost a young fortune."

"Well, don't they," smiled Smith?

"Let's look at it this way," said the plumber. "I noticed your car in front of the house. You bought and paid for that, didn't you?"

"I sure did, but I've got you there. You see it was a second hand car and it cost only $450."

"How many years of service do you expect to get from it?"

"Oh—two or three—at the most."

"Now, Mr. Smith, I'm not pulling a super salesman's gag on you, but I'm sure new fixtures, from tub to closet, to modernize your entire bathroom would run considerably below that!"

"You don't say so," exclaimed Smith!

"Yes, indeed, and they would be a lifetime investment. They would be a permanent source of comfort and beauty to you and your family for years to come!"

The story demonstrates the inadvisability of any homeowner thinking he cannot modernize his plumbing because he imagines the cost is beyond his budget.

Remember, if your budget is limited there are less elaborate fixtures that are beautiful and efficient—practical and economical.

So don't think you can't modernize your plumbing. See your Master Plumber first—perhaps you'll find you can.

And by the way, Smith had the new fixtures installed!

Newest of "Standard" Baths, the Master Pembroke is beautiful in its modern straight line design—convenient and safer with its lower height giving greater ease for stepping in or out—Ideal for shower bathing, for the wider, flatter bottom permits bather to turn more safely and easily so the shower sprays every portion of the body.

MAKE A DOWNSTAIRS POWDER ROOM OUT OF THAT OLD HALL CLOSET

How many times have you wished for a supplementary powder room and lavatory downstairs?

What a joy and convenience this room would prove to be. Think of the steps it would save you all day long and how grand for the children to be able to wash up after school—before dinner—without making the "pilgrimage" upstairs!

A Grand Idea

Here's a practical, economical suggestion. Turn the old hall closet into this extra powder room you've always wanted. Modern fixtures—lavatory and closet are so smartly and compactly designed they lend themselves to this purpose perfectly. Combined with a little decorating, new linoleum, bright, gay curtains, and presto! You've an elegant extra washroom—as modern as tomorrow.

Take this tip—it's a grand idea! While there are many beautiful "Standard" Lavatories and Water Closets from which to choose when planning your powder room and especially some of a distinctly space saving type, the two fixtures shown in illustration to the right are ideal for the purpose. The Companion Lavatory of vitreous china has a shelf back convenient for toilet articles, has fittings on back so water from dripping hands falls into bowl, and beautiful non-tarnishing Chromard fittings. The One-Piece Closet matches the Companion in design and degree of modern efficiency. It is so quiet it will not embarrass though the powder room is near to the living room.

AROUND THE CLOCK WITH THE NEO-ANGLE SHOWING FEATURES THAT APPEAL TO THE WHOLE FAMILY

Of course father starts the day happily with a shower. He always stands for his shower but enjoys the new freedom permitted by the wide, flat bottom of the Neo-Angle. Bud prefers a more leisurely sitting shower, delighted with the convenient seats. Mother bathes the kiddies, thankful to sit while doing so. Auntie loves to take her time and leisurely sit while bathing. Mother wants to relax in a warm tub bath, appreciating, too, the ample elbow room. Sis gives attention to feet so comfortably, sitting on one seat with a foot on the other seat. Grandpa thinks the best feature is that he can sit to enter or leave. Grandma closes the day with a foot bath to rest her weary feet, finding the Neo-Angle the most practical foot bath she has ever seen.

"Standard" BRASS GOODS FIT "Standard" PLUMBING FIXTURES

"Standard" Faucets, Supplies, Traps, etc., are designed for "Standard" Fixtures and made in the "Standard" Brass Plant, largest of its kind in the world. Naturally this insures perfect harmony of fixtures and fittings, absolute control of purity of metals used, precision of manufacture and assurance of a thoroughly tested, dependable product.

The "Standard" Combination Hot and Cold Water Faucets (identified by the word RE-NU stamped upon them) have renewable seats and threads. When long use has worn these parts, a new assembly can be had for a small fraction of the cost of a new fitting, completely restoring its efficiency.

In addition to the extra care given in the selection of materials, methods of manufacture and mechanical construction for efficient operation, "Standard" has devoted special attention to beauty of design. On page 3 are shown four distinct varieties of Trim. Each is beautiful, each in appearance and quality matches the "Standard" Plumbing Fixtures for which they are made. Everything Within Reach In The Modern Cabinet Sink

Gracious lady, stand up and cheer! For gone are the days of the old-fashioned, high-backed, ugly sink. To the room in which succulent, savory dishes are created comes the modern cabinet sink—complete with accessories and conveniences—as delightful to look at as to use.

Work In Daylight

Built on modern streamline principles, new Hostess Sinks have a low back, only 4 inches high. This feature enables the

CAST IRON ENAMEL WARE THE LOGICAL CHOICE FOR THE SINK

There are many thousands of "Standard" Sinks installed and giving lasting satisfaction. Made with dry process enamel on rigid cast iron there is no better finish, finer gloss, longer life to be found or approached by any other material or process. "Standard" Sinks provide strength, rigidity, a non-absorbent, easily cleaned surface. They do not give annoying sounds when articles are set down upon them.

In "Standard" Enameled Sinks there are no joints at junction of back, sink well, drainboard and front rim. Smooth, permanently water tight joints at these places when installing flat rim sinks with back and drainboards of other materials is a problem difficult of satisfactory solution. "Standard" Sinks, all in one piece, solve that problem and make possible, therefore, sanitary installations of modern sinks with cabinets.

AN EASY STEP BY STEP MODERNIZATION PLAN

1 Still useable but who wants a 1900 period bathroom. No matter how fine it was considered then, it is now antiquated, hard to clean, lacking in convenience. Easily budgeted, a fixture at a time, the redecorating in part at various times and then this bathroom becomes magically modern.

2 The serpentine curves, once considered so beautiful now emphasize the obsolescence of the lavatory. Let's replace it. The straight lines of the Companion Lavatory with its shelf back and non-tarnishing Chromard legs adds the first pleasing note, making this a much improved room.

3 Later that unsightly closet with its cracked seat, corroded flush connection and noisy tank is replaced with a modern Compact Closet. It is the ideal replacement closet as its two-piece close-coupled construction has the attractive one-piece appearance, and it is moderately priced.

4 Even six months later a Master Pembroke Bath may relegate the old antique tub to well deserved oblivion. New beauty of design, flatter rim, flatter bottom, more bathing space, will delight you. Now with all three new fixtures in color, you have a most modern, beautiful bathroom.

New Life to Kitchen

Yes! From every angle the new cabinet sinks have brought new life to the kitchen. The bright Chromard trimmings and easy-to-clean acid resisting enameled surfaces are beautiful and easy to keep sparkling and spotless. The Hostess, like all "Standard" Kitchen Sinks, can be had in white or one of 10 colors. Color in the central fixture of the kitchen is most helpful in achieving a lovely, cheerful color scheme. "Standard" Sinks can be had to match the white, green and ivory in which the cabinets are furnished, or in one of the other "Standard" Fixture Colors to give a two-color effect, such as a rose sink with a green cabinet.

The "Standard" Hostess Sink Cabinets are so designed that you may add extra cabinets on either side if needed.

KITCHEN PLANNING STARTS

NEW EQUIPMENT SAVES STEPS

Remember way back—well, not so many years ago—the old-fashioned kitchen. Plain wood floors, a coal range in one corner—“half a mile away”, high closets for storage of dishes and staples and in still another part of the kitchen, the sink—and so on.

What a job the housewife of yesterday had! Steps, steps, steps. Nothing placed for convenience, comfort or less work.

All Is Changed Today

Today, walk into the modern kitchen. What a far cry from the kitchen of yore! No longer does the housewife waste half her time walking to and fro to prepare a meal or to clean up. Modern kitchen science places everything at fingertips—within easy reach.

Cabinets are placed in relation to sink and stove. Gleaming Chromard Finish and sparkling enamel enable you to keep your kitchen spotless—always!

Better Light For Better Work

And no longer is the kitchen poorly lighted with small windows with stove, sink and cupboards shoved into dingy corners. No! Today you work in daylight as long as it lasts. Glorious sunshine streams in through large windows over the low back sink to brighten the colorfully decorated room, to make you feel cheerful and happy, to speed you in your work—to make kitchen work a real pleasure!

NEW FEATURES OF THE "Standard" HOSTESS SINK

Among the important features of the "Standard" Hostess Sink are the fittings located on a shelf in rear of sink well. Thus placed they are out of the way when not needed, yet the swinging spout is conveniently at hand when required. This fitting supplies hot, cold or tempered water as desired to sink well or to spray hose. The spray hose for sanitary thorough cleansing of dishes is long reaching yet instantly slides out of the way when not in use.

The Chromard Finish Union Strip makes possible the neat, tight joining of the Sink with other cabinets on either or both ends.

BEAUTIFUL, MATCHED FITTINGS

What new beauty, and how great a load of cleaning labor lifted, "Standard" Chromard Finish has meant to housewives! Underneath this non-tarnishing finish is quality material, precision machining and lasting durability. "Standard" made Brass Goods fit "Standard" Plumbing Fixtures.

A Hostess Advantage

An eight inch deep sink well with a metal stopper and crumb cup strainer makes it possible to wash dishes without a dish pan. The Hostess Sink is made of acid-resisting enamel on rigid cast iron, the material proved over many years to be the best for kitchen sinks.

Convenient swinging spout faucet has transfer valve which directs water to spout or spray.

It can be made especially easy—convenient on the "Standard" Time Payment Plan.

PLUMBING IS A PUBLIC TRUST

This pleasing, efficient bathroom was easily made from the old, dingy room shown below. This marvelous change was achieved by using the new Master Pembroke Bath P-2212-U, Hexagon Lavatory P-3869-M and Compton Closet F-2110. Such a change makes a wonderful difference in a home and it is so easy to have by paying for it a little each month.

More than ever before, people have come to recognize the importance of plumbing to health protection.

Plumbing furnishes the fresh, pure water so essential to comfort and well-being and carries away the wastes so dangerous to health.

The very fact that good plumbing functions so efficiently and so unobtrusively causes some people to accept all plumbing as good plumbing.

Unfortunately, these people are easy prey for the irresponsible, destructive forces that offer the lure of price instead of the assurance of satisfactory service and health.

The public pays the penalty by high repair bills, unsatisfactory service, discomfort and even sickness.

Good plumbing service cannot be sold over the counter, because installation is such an important factor.

It means too much to the welfare of your family, to the uninterrupted enjoyment of your home and to the actual value of your property to entrust plumbing to any but the only men qualified by training and experience to assure satisfactory service and health protection—the Master Plumbers.

Our long experience has convinced us that the most satisfactory and economical way to protect public interest is to safeguard our plumbing fixtures by marketing them through Wholesale Distributors to Master Plumbers, who in turn serve the public.

To our Wholesale Distributors, the Master Plumbers and ourselves, plumbing is a public trust. We believe more than ever before that "The Plumber Protects the Health of the Nation."

Describes the ACID- and ALKALINE-ASH FOODS and Explains Their Role in Maintaining the ACID-BASE
BALANCE of the Body ★ ★ ★

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS
6 East 39th Street, New York City.

ACIDITY is the topic of the hour. On every side we hear people complaining that they have too much acid in their systems, that they suffer from acid stomach, acid headaches, acid mouth, acidosis. In fact, most adults fancy themselves victims of a great battle between acid and alkaline forces, with the acid having the better of it. They confuse gastric acidity—which is entirely normal, for the healthy stomach is always strongly acid—with the potential acidity of foods which leave an acid residue following digestion. And many of them are convinced that they should take drastic steps to overcome the danger of acidosis.

The Vogue of Acidosis

There are fashions in disease, just as in dress, home furnishings and automobiles. Ten years ago, we heard much about the evils of auto-intoxication, and it was some time before people realized that they had been misled by the extreme claims of those who had some sort of remedy to sell. And now it is acidosis that is the most talked of complaint. Friends caution one another against this or that food, with the mistaken idea that it causes or aggravates an acid condition. Food faddists have frightened thousands by suggesting that acidosis is brought about by mixing various kinds of foods.

Health Endangered

Indeed, we have come to a point where the fear of a so-called acid condition is assuming proportions which indicate the possibility of real trouble unless the American people get the true facts and put aside these foolish delusions. Physiologists believe that fear and worry have a detrimental effect on digestion, and, in turn, on the general health. Thus eating meals in constant fear of acidity may upset the digestion and bring about the very symptoms that you are trying to avoid. One well-known authority contends that perhaps 90 per cent of digestive distress, attributed to the kind or combinations of food eaten, is actually due to unfavorable mental or emotional states, and other causes such as over-eating, even when fatigued, or consuming at one meal too many foods that are difficult to digest. It, therefore, becomes apparent that thousands of people are contributing to their own discomfort as a result of fear, ignorance, or a blind belief in misleading claims which are opposed to scientific facts.

Acidosis Uncommon

The danger is not from acidosis, but from the fear of this bugbear, and from self medication in the belief that certain remedies are required to overcome a fancied condition. For in spite of the large amount of acid produced in metabolism, the blood normally remains remarkably constant and slightly alkaline, due to a highly efficient buffer system.

Perhaps you wonder, if this is so, why doctors and dietitians talk so much about the acid-base balance.

The Acid-Base Balance

To understand this phrase, you must know that every food leaves an ash when burned in the body, just as ashes remain when coal or wood is burned in a furnace. In the body, the ash consists of valuable minerals which are required in large amounts to maintain optimal health.

Some foods, such as meat, fish, eggs and cereals, leave an acid ash because the predominating minerals are phosphorus, chlorine and sulphur. Other foods, chiefly milk and most fruits and vegetables, leave an alkaline ash because the remaining minerals are principally calcium, magnesium, potassium and sodium. These are the base-forming foods.

Besides the alkaline ash and acid ash foods, there is a group of foods, including sugar, cornstarch and purified fats, which are so highly refined that no minerals remain after they are burned; and some other foods, such as butter and cream, leave a balance of the two types of ash. These are known as neutral foods.

Cannot Trust Your Tongue

The sense of taste cannot be relied upon as a guide in determining which foods are acid and which alkaline. For example, cereals, which are bland to the taste, have an acid reaction following digestion. Bread, likewise, is acid forming, although you would not suspect that fact from its taste. On the other hand, potatoes, though somewhat similar to bread in flavor and food value,

Have You a Question?

Ask C. Houston Goudiss

C. Houston Goudiss has put at the disposal of readers of this newspaper all the facilities of his famous Experimental Kitchen Laboratory in New York City. He will gladly answer questions concerning foods, diet, nutrition, and their relation to health. You are also invited to consult him in matters of personal hygiene. It's not necessary to write a letter unless you desire, for post-card inquiries will receive the same careful attention. Address him at 6 East 39th Street, New York City.

are one of our most valuable alkaline foods, and dried lima beans are the most highly alkaline of any food known.

If it seems curious that such bland foods should have an acid ash, you may find it even harder to believe that oranges, lemons, grapefruit, peaches and tomatoes, which taste acid in the mouth, leave an alkaline ash following digestion. But the fact is that the body performs a clever bit of chemical engineering and the final effect on the blood is alkaline.

Homemaker's Responsibility

A balanced diet must include sufficient base-forming foods to neutralize and counter-balance the effects of the acids formed in metabolism.

That is one reason why it is so important for the homemaker to provide her family with plenty of milk, fruits and vegetables, in addition to the necessary meat, fish, eggs and cereals.

In general, one is likely to feel better when base-forming foods predominate, at least slightly, in the diet over acid-forming foods. Some authorities believe that this may be due not so much to their effect on the acid-base balance as to the fact that they provide such splendid amounts of vitamins, minerals and fiber.

However, one must not make the mistake of becoming so enthusiastic over building a highly alkaline diet that one overlooks good foods necessary to round out a balanced diet.

To those homemakers who take seriously the important job of feeding a family, and wish to be correctly informed, I shall gladly send a chart showing which foods are alkaline and which acid. It can be used as a helpful guide in planning a balanced diet.

Send for this chart and increase your food knowledge. In the meantime, don't under any circumstances allow misguided individuals to frighten you into joining the vast army of acid-minded people who are so concerned over the possibilities of acidosis that they haven't time to enjoy life.

Questions Answered

Miss M. V.—Indeed I am not against the eating of fried foods, except in abnormal conditions where, for some reason, the fat intake must be restricted. The moderate use of fried foods, which have been properly cooked, makes the diet palatable and interesting.

Mrs. R. McK.—Generally speaking, the ideal weight for men and women over thirty is their normal weight at the age of thirty. From that time on, the scales should be watched, and the food intake reduced as soon as a gain is noticed. When maturity is reached, food is no longer required to support growth, and unless muscular activity is maintained at a high level, the total energy requirement will gradually decline.

Mrs. S. T. R.—No, egg whites most certainly are not toxic, except to people who have an allergy toward this food. For all normal individuals, they offer an excellent source of protein.

HOW to SEW

By RUTH WYETH
SPEARS

THE windows shown here are the same size. The center one is made to look taller by adding an extension at the top. The one on the right is made wider with extensions at the sides. Tall windows lend dignity and a note of formality. By placing the tie-backs quite high this effect is emphasized even more.

Wide windows often make a room seem larger and give wall spaces better proportions. Extensions at the sides may also be used so the draperies will cover less of the window, giving more view and sunlight. This is a particularly good trick to try in the summer with straight curtains hung so they barely cover the woodwork at the sides of the window.

To make a window higher, merely screw blocks of wood to the top of the frame as at A and B with metal straps such as may be obtained at any hardware store. The curtain rods are then screwed to the wood blocks. To add width, screw the blocks to the sides of the window frame as at C and D. If tie-backs are to be used, extensions for them may be added as at E and F.

Draperies like the ones shown here may be lined or not according to the weight of the material used. My book SEWING, for the Home Decorator, shows you exactly how to make them either way and how to make the French heading. This book also gives directions for making slipcovers; all types of dressing table covers; seventeen different types of curtains; bedspreads; and numerous other useful and decorative things for the home. Readers wishing a copy should address Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill., enclosing 25 cents (coin preferred) and the book will be sent by return mail.

to the Housewife

To Brown Pies and Tarts.—Use a small pastry brush to apply milk lightly before putting pies or tarts in the oven. To glaze pies, brush them with the white of an egg if you wish them to be a shiny brown.

Boil Canned Fruit.—Tinned fruit is greatly improved in flavor if turned out into a saucepan and boiled for one minute.

One Creamed Dish.—In selecting a soup for a meal remember that creamed soups should not be served when there are creamed vegetables or creamed fish to follow.

FREEDOM OF SPEECH

"Freedom of the press may protect criticism and agitation for modification or repeal of laws, but it does not extend to protection of him who counsels and encourages the violation of the law as it exists. The Constitution was adopted to preserve our government, not to serve as a protecting screen for those who, while claiming its privileges, seek to destroy it."—Supreme Court of the United States, in Milwaukee Publishing Company v. Burleson, 225 U.S. 407.

TINLEY RALLIES IN NINTH; TIES MOKENA 6 TO 6

The Tinley Park Boy's baseball team came from behind in the last half of the ninth inning to tie Mokena six to six. The game scheduled to go into extra innings was halted by coaches of both teams because of the cold weather.

Tinley Park trailed Mokena into the latter part of the 9th inning 6 to 5. With a man on 2nd and two outs the game looked almost certain for Mokena. Nugent the Tinley catcher came up. Tierney the Mokena pitcher put two fast balls past the batter. On the next pitch Nugent singled past second to score John Rinsink with the tying run. Despite the cold weather, Don Boerner and Dave Tierney pitched remarkable ball. Boerner yielded six hits while fanning 18. He walked only three batters showing perfect control.

The Old Rugged Cross
"Oh that old rugged cross, so dispirited by the world of sin and sinful people."

On The Cross
One of the malefactors which were hanged on a cross beside our Savior, railed on Him, saying, "If thou be Christ, save thyself and us. But the thief on the cross on the other side of Jesus, rebuked him saying, 'Dost not thou fear God, seeing thou art in the same condemnation, and we indeed justly? For we receive the due reward of our deeds but this man hath done nothing amiss'. Insult was heaped upon injury as Christ was placed between two criminals. But no insult could chill the warm heart of the Savior. And He answered the plea thus: 'Verily I say unto thee, Today shalt thou be with Me in paradise'. If Christ Jesus could point a sinner to the Kingdom at such an hour, how much more should we take advantage of every opportunity to tell the lost of their Savior!

We are making a plea for a piano or an organ for the Sunday School.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES
"Adam and Fallen Man" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, May 8.

The Golden Text was, "The Redeemer shall come to Zion, and unto them that turn from transgression in Jacob, saith the Lord" (Isaiah 59:20).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "For ye were sometimes darkness, but now are ye light in the Lord: walk as children of light: (For the fruit of the Spirit is in all goodness and righteousness and truth); Proving what is acceptable unto the Lord" (Ephesians 5:8-11).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "The dream that matter and error are something must yield to reason and revelation. Then mortals will behold the nothingness of sickness and sin, and sin and sickness will disappear from consciousness" (p. 347).

SYNOPSIS

Sarah Lynn Dana, youngest of the Dana women of Danavale, Calif., chafes at the well-ordered life approved by her mother, Adelaide, who is trying to marry her to Duncan Van Doren, Detroit society youth. Great-Granny Dana, covered-wagon pioneer, and community matriarch, recognizes in the girl the restless adventurousness of the "dark Danas," a trait shared by her and Cousin Sally Ann Dana, traveler and author, and pleads with Sally Ann to take the girl abroad. Uncle Lynn, wheelchair invalid, adds his plea to Sally Ann to save Sarah Lynn, as does the girl's young brother, Bill. Another plea comes from Miss Pennington, "Penny," adoring governess of the girl, saying she is unhappy and misunderstood. At a family dinner party, Sally Ann first hears of Keaton Dana's ultra-modern wife, Ardine, who runs a roadhouse called the Stewed Prune, and is trying to wangle a fight with Gunnar Thorwald, Norwegian ace, famous for his refusal to fly women, through their mutual friend, Jim Allison. Gunnar Thorwald arrives with Jim Allison, and Sarah Lynn is attracted to him. Duncan invites her to the Stewed Prune. Sarah Lynn refuses to drink anything but ginger ale. Cousin Mary Dana Webster tells Sarah she suspects Ardine and her friends of framing on Gunnar, and Sarah Lynn, in an increasing stupor, decides to warn him. When Gunnar arrives, angry at Jim Allison for missing connections, he hears Sarah Lynn cry, "Go away! Don't come in! Ladybug, fly away home," and sees her carried out to the ladies' room, unconscious. Gunnar arrives at the airport, Sarah Lynn, partly out of her stupor, imagines the sensations of flying, with Gunnar at the controls. Gunnar, flying to Los Angeles, senses someone standing behind him. When he realizes it is Sarah Lynn, he shouts, "Keep away from me, drunken fool," will listen to no explanation, and detours to Fresno. Thrown out at Fresno "like a sack of mail," Sarah Lynn is greeted by a group headed by a bride and groom, who recognize Gunnar. While the "bride" drives Sarah Lynn to the hotel to await her father, one of the party phones the story to the newspapers, inflaming the two fliers, and the "bride" as Kitty Medill, wild stunt flier. Danavale is convinced Sarah Lynn has been drugged. Uncle Lynn promises to get the truth to Gunnar. Sally takes Sarah Lynn abroad, and writes Uncle Lynn of her plan to make an aviatrix out of her. Sarah Lynn receives a cable from home, saying her mother is threatened with pneumonia. Sarah Lynn arrives home. Gunnar comes to ask her pardon and invites her to fly.

Conrad Jordan observed him with satisfaction. "That lad will never smash up through its own carelessness," he nodded. He amplified it for her—"Most of the crashes occur on the ground."

"I see," Sarah Lynn said quickly. He considered her shrewdly. "I believe you do." They were stepping nearer to the plane and he said above the roar, "You can get aboard now." He took her elbow in a firm hand and helped her into the cabin.

She sat down quickly in the rear seat, fastening the belt about her waist, calmly folding her hands in her lap.

The Hermod taxied sturdily down the field and took off trimly. There were instants when it seemed to hang in the clear air, suspended over the field. She could see Conrad Jordan waving. Presently he lost dignity and importance and became a tiny toy figure in a world of playthings and vanished altogether.

They flew over the Santa Cruz mountains, brown, green, compact as if they had been carved out of wood and painted.

They circled the water and turned inland again, picking up the mountains, Danavale, San Jose, the airport, like dropped stitches.

Sarah Lynn caught her breath. "Quick! Such heavenly quickness!"

He nodded. "I have named him for Hermod, the swift one. You know?"

"I know. Hermes—Mercury."

"Yes. We go down, now."

The west was darkening when they swooped to earth with a suave landing and rolled briskly to the hangar.

The old attendant came limping to open the door and help her out. Conrad Jordan was not in sight.

"He said would you come speak to him in the 'phone booth,'" the man addressed Gunnar, and the Norwegian ace followed him in.

The older flier stood with the receiver in his hand. "Hello, Gunnar! Do you mind? I'm waiting for this Glendene connection. Will you run Miss Dana home for me?"

"Please don't trouble," she said quickly. "They will send a car for me." But Gunnar was already stepping toward the roadster and she followed him.

He drove a car as smoothly as a plane. They had ticked off a twilight mile before he spoke. "You have no fear."

"No."

"That is good."

After a moment she said, "I want to be a flier."

"That is also good."

"Then, you think women should fly?"

"Why not? Women have courage; the skill they may learn. In the ancient history of my country the women fought often beside their men."

"I know." She remembered the governess' books from the library. "My grandmother," he began again, his voice warmer than she had heard it before, "there could be no more of courage in woman or man." Presently he said, "Your grandmother I also like."

Sarah Lynn nodded. "Oh, Great-granny's splendid! She ran away from home when she was fifteen and joined an emigrant train and came across the plains in a covered wagon, and there were Indians and hunger and thirst and—"

They were running into Danavale. "Oh, not my uncle's house! I want to go home, please. To the left." It would be over in a moment and there was a thing she must ask. "I've been wondering. There isn't any fear, I know that, of course, but when you're flying alone, hour after hour, do you ever think about death?"

"Often," he told her readily. "With great interest. But not with—what is your word?—eagerness?" She nodded; it seemed an excellent word.

"This house?" The large, complacent dwelling of Edwin and Adelaide Dana was all golden windows. "Of death: yes. An adventure," Gunnar Thorwald said, stopping the car. "Life is one adventure; death is another. I wish you the good-evening."

Sarah Lynn stepped out, and instantly, without another word, he was away. Gunnar Thorwald drove Conrad Jordan's car swiftly back to the airport and found the Hermod put away for the night and his friend waiting for him outside the hangar. "So," the Norwegian ace said gravely, "you are satisfied? I have asked the pardon; I have taken her to fly. It is finished."

"You mean—?"

It must have been almost at the same instant that Lynn Dana was typing to his traveling cousin in Geneva. "And so, Sally Ann, my dear, it has begun!"

Sarah Lynn was twenty years old on the fifteenth of June. Her first waking thought was, "Now I'm exactly old enough to begin my flight training!"

For months she had been saying, "I'd like to fly," and "I want to fly," and finally, "I'm going to fly!" but without any deeper delving into the proposition.

Sarah Lynn's place at the breakfast table was festive with flowers and tissue-and-ribboned packages. Her mother made much of birthdays.

Her dark and difficult daughter opened her gifts with grateful warmth and ran to kiss and thank her.

"I'm so glad they make you happy, darling. But you haven't looked at the big box yet," she reminded her archly.

It would be from Duncan Van Doren, of course, from the smartest of San Francisco florists. She lifted away damp layers of glistening green paper and registered authentic appreciation. She touched lilies-of-the-valley and forget-me-nots and tiny pink rosebuds with her brown finger-tips. "Duncan has perfect taste."

"Ah, yes, hasn't he?" her mother said gratefully. "Will you arrange them now, dear? The low green bowls and the little crystal vases for the lilies?"

"You fix them for me, Mother, please! You do it so much better—and Penny's waiting. I promised to walk with her."

Mrs. Dana was wistfully cheery about it, sure that a brisk walk would do her child good. "But don't stay away too long, darling!" she said with the look which meant her sly, sweet hopes. "Happy plans for the birthday?"

Sarah Lynn found the governess and the greyhound waiting for her. They set off together through the increasing loveliness of the day.

"Queer! No presents from Great-granny and Uncle Lynn!"

"Ah, well, the day's not done!" Miss Pennington wagged her head in its stern, out-dated sailor hat.

"Penny, where shall we go? The high meadow? Remember how I used to tease the ladybugs and make them fly away home and tell them their houses were on fire and their children would burn?"

"I remember."

"Uncle Lynn and Great-granny used to call me Ladybug, didn't they? I haven't thought of that for years."

"Haven't you, indeed?"

Something in her tone made Sarah Lynn halt. "Penny, dear, we are going too fast? Lightning seems to set the pace but we can shift into low if you like!"

"Certainly not!"

"Oh, look at Lightning!" The greyhound, at the bend of the road, tensely silhouetted, was gazing fixedly into space. "Isn't she glorious when she's sighting something? Her lines do things to me, like sunsets and symphonies."

They rounded the curve and Sarah Lynn cried: "There's a plane! Look, Penny—a plane in our field!" She began to run, Lightning bounding before with shrill, suspicious barks.

There in the center of the broad meadow, searing already toward the long, bright, rainless summer, an airplane rested on the ground like some great bird briefly breaking its flight. It did not look disabled to Sarah Lynn, and the pilot stood unhurt beside it. Out of gas, probably. There was a closed car close by, and she was abreast of it before she realized it was the one shared by her great-grandmother and her uncle.

She stood still, then, beginning to shake with excitement. The ancestress hopped nimbly out of the machine and hurried to her. There were dabs of dull crimson on her cheek-bones and she was laughing in her shrill, cackling giggle.

Her great-granddaughter managed a strangled whisper. "What—what is it?"

"It's your covered wagon, Sairy Lynn!"

"For me? To keep?" Questions going off like a string of small fire-crackers.

"Yours," Lynn Dana answered from the windows of the car.

She ran to him, her mouth working. "Uncle Lynn, Uncle Lynn! Not—belonging to me? To fly?"

"All yours and only yours. Many happy returns from Great-Granny and me. We let Conrad Jordan and Gunnar Thorwald pick it out for us, but we were very firm about having a Gipsy Moth." He grinned at her. "It was the nearest we could get."

Then she saw what he meant. The little ship was painted a clear, sharp, lacquer red with its name in black letters—L A D Y B U G.

The pilot tugged briefly at his cap. "Le Roy's my name. Flew her over for you." He had a deeply scarred face and a bitter mouth, but there was a look of weathered and seasoned youth about him.

"Want to take a hop?"

"Yes! But first I must look!" She walked round and round the plane, several times putting out a hand to touch it. Then she went back to the donors and gave a hand to each and stood staring at them.

"Great-granny, Uncle Lynn—" she began, trying to assemble an adequate sentence. She shut her eyes and kept the lids tight for a long instant before she opened them again, and the nonagenarian and the man who had sat still in a chair for more than half his life would always remember the drowned glory of them. "Do you mind if I go?" she asked huskily.

"You just up'n put out, Sairy Lynn," the ancient woman told her, shrilly competing with the noise of the motor.

The man said with his good grin, "Ladybug, Ladybug, fly away home!"

Then she ran back to the plane, Lightning beside her. "Are you going to teach me?"

The pilot nodded without undue enthusiasm.

"How long will it take?"

She shrugged. "Depends." She flushed. "Of course. But, I mean, if I try with all my might—if I'm not too dumb—if I study and work—"

"Just for a Private, of course. Private Flying License. That's the quickest. Ten hours instruction, ten hours solo flying; that's the minimum."

"Yes," she said contentedly.

"When is my first lesson?"

"Tomorrow."

"Oh, not today?"

He shook his head. "Physical examination—lots of details to fix up. But I'll hop you over to the field, now, and your folks'll drive over after you. Ready?" With swift strength he swung her up and into the cockpit and climbed in himself.

CHAPTER VIII

Soon they were taxiing over the meadow, and Sarah Lynn saw with a warm uprush of gratitude that it had been leveled into the semblance of a decent landing-field. Great-granny, Uncle Lynn, going to that extra expense so that she might see her Ladybug first in the setting of old memories.

The plane turned, disdained the browning grass, rose serenely into the air. Instantly, Sarah Lynn knew in a blaze of ecstasy that she had never flown before! Turning traitor to all earlier thrills, she realized that a cabin-plane cut into two the kingdom and the power and the glory. Now, with nothing between her and the sky, she was really flying!

"My first flight in my own plane!" she told herself rapturously. "I can never be as happy as this again if I live to be a hundred!"

She wished passionately that there were more hours instead of minutes before her, but the Gipsy Moth devoured the miles relentlessly, and came daintily down at the San Jose airport.

Men came running with grinning, friendly faces to help her out, mechanics, helpers, attendants. There was a youth with a camera which clicked as Sarah Lynn stepped to the ground.

"Well, Miss Dana, how do you like your boat? Slick job, huh? Going to fly her yourself?" He came closer. "Mind if I get one of you and Gunnar Thorwald together?" the reporter persisted. "Shaking hands, huh? Sort of 'Welcome to the sky!'"

"Gunnar Thorwald isn't here," she began coldly, but then she saw him coming toward her. "Oh, please, we'd rather not!" She kept her head down.

The Norwegian ace reached them. "I drive you home," he said without preliminary greeting.

The young newspaper man managed a snapshot while they got into Jordan's car. "Thanks a lot!" he called out, his nose looking pertly triumphant.

They rolled out of the field and down the road.

"Oh, I forgot!" Sarah Lynn said. "Great-granny and Uncle Lynn were coming for me! I'm afraid I must wait for them."

"We meet them on the road?"

"Yes, we could—"

"You must go quickly home?"

"Oh, no," she discarded the happy birthday plans at which her mother had archly hinted. "You mean—"

"I have the earnest wish to see those large trees."

A muscle twitched in her cheek. "Then we'll go to Felton, over the mountains, an hour, an hour and a half—"

Human Head Swells in Literal and Not Metaphorical Sense as Owner Grows Older

Dr. Ales Hrdlicka, the curator of physical anthropology at the Smithsonian institution, has found that the human head swells in a literal and not a metaphorical sense as its owner grows older, notes a writer in the New York Sun. The theory is supported by the testimony of Sir Flinders Petrie, the eminent archeologist and Egyptologist, who has kept tab on his hat sizes through the years. At twenty a size 6½ hat fitted him comfortably; at thirty he required a 7 to 7½; with the passing of another decade his hat size increased by a quarter; at fifty another quarter was added, and at sixty his head had outgrown all standard size hats. The Smithsonian considers this record as of more than usual significance "because of the incessant and continued intellectual work of the English archeologist."

In the Aleutian islands, off the southern coast of Alaska, Dr. Hrdlicka discovered a skull with a brain capacity of 2,005 cubic centimeters. This find aroused great interest because the skull, so far as is known, is the second largest in the history of mankind. The record is held by the skull of Turgenev, the Russian novelist, with a brain capacity of 2,030 cubic centimeters. The average skull capacity is about 1,450 centimeters for men and from 1,250 to 1,300 for women. Other mental giants were Daniel Webster, with a measurement of 2,000 cubic centimeters; Bismarck, with 1,965; Beethoven, with 1,750; and Kant, with 1,740. On the other hand, Napoleon's brain weighed only 68.5 ounces and Walt Whitman's only 45.3, compared with the 74 ounces registered by Turgenev's. It follows, therefore, that sheer weight of brain is not necessarily an index to high intelligence. What counts more is the "bark" or cortex of gray matter that sheaths the convolutions of the cerebral hemispheres. The size of the dead Aleut's skull does not in itself prove that he towered mentally above his fellows when he was alive.

Blood Suckers

Leeches, being parasitic to a considerable degree, can usually be found clinging to the skin of the hind legs of a snapping turtle, feeding on its blood.

TESTING DISCIPLESHIP BY SERVICE

LESSON TEXT—Mark 10:17-31. GOLDEN TEXT—Come . . . and follow me.—Mark 10:21. PRIMARY TOPIC—A Young Man Jesus Loved.

JUNIOR TOPIC—What a Rich Man Needed.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Proving Our Loyalty to Christ by Service. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Marks of Discipleship.

"The almighty dollar"—how triumphantly it rules in the affairs of nations and of the men who make up nations. The world's measure of success is how much one can "make," and "no questions asked" as to how one made it, if he but avoid the legal pitfalls that may land him in jail. Even that is no longer a disgrace, for men who have defrauded others serve a term in jail to "pay their debt to society," and then return without shame to enjoy the use of their ill-gotten gains. Skill in the arts and sciences is rated according to its financial value. Brains and beauty are commodities of the market place. Liquor is permitted to destroy our people because it provides a profit.

The minds of men and women of decency and intelligence revolt at the whole situation. Let us encourage them as we improve the opportunity today to present God's moral and spiritual standards.

I. Self Before God (vv. 17-22).

The rich young ruler had many advantages and virtues. He was young, life was before him, vivid was his imagination, strong was his body. He was educated, and developed intelligence is an honor to any man. He had position, which can always be used for good. He had money, which when rightly gained and used, is a powerful and honorable possession. Above all, he had the priceless jewel of good character. Notice that he had kept the commandments, that he came before the Lord in humility seeking truth, and that Jesus "loved him" (v. 21).

Almost any father would be proud to own this young man as a son. Many churches would welcome him to membership and even to leadership. Jesus dealt with him honestly, however, and went to the root of his difficulty which was that he loved himself and his possessions more than he loved God. Therefore he must give them up before he could really follow Jesus. Sad indeed was his refusal. He came running (v. 17), but he went away sorrowful (v. 22).

What stands between you and a full surrender to Christ? Face it honestly. Be thankful if your pastor or a friend frankly points it out. Shun those who would "pat you on the back" and assure you that all is well. A cancer will kill unless it is cut out. The surgeon's knife may hurt, but it is an instrument of good. Note that the statement of Jesus in verse 18 is not a denial of His deity, but a definite claim that He is God. He says in effect, "If you call me good you must recognize that I am God."

II. God Before Self (vv. 21-27).

The disciples, who evidently shared the common opinion that money could do almost anything, were surprised to hear that riches were really a hindrance to spirituality, because (v. 24) of the tendency of men to trust in their wealth and forget their need of God.

Jesus does not leave the rich man without hope, for he goes on to say that what is impossible for men and even for the rich man himself is entirely possible with God.

Two things need emphasis in this connection. First, let those of us who have little of this world's goods be thankful that we have, at least, been delivered from this temptation. It may well be an expression of God's love and grace toward us. Second, let us thank God for every man of wealth who has given himself and what he has into God's hands.

III. The Last Before the First (vv. 28-31).

The ways of God are confusing and humbling to the flesh. The way up in spiritual things is to go down (Mark 9:35). Those who are first in the eyes of men are often last in God's sight. Others whom men count as least stand highest in God's sight because they are faithful and true to Him. The world looks at the missionary of the cross and says, "He has sacrificed everything," and knows nothing of the "hundredfold" reward even in this life, "and in the world to come, eternal life" (v. 30).

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery. Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder may be burning, scanty or too frequent urination. There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
by William Bruckart

National Press Building Washington, D. C.

Washington.—In the midst of all of the politics and planning in the national capital, there has lately come to the surface one of the deepest and most bitter rows that has developed incident to the administration of Franklin D. Roosevelt. It is the controversy, long smoldering, between the President and the newspapers of the country. It is out in the open now, and the struggle is a desperate one.

To go back a few years, it will be remembered how Mr. Roosevelt was described as having a very friendly press when he entered the White House. He continued to maintain the most pleasant relations between his office and the newspapers of the country, and especially with the Washington correspondents, until doubt began to develop in the minds of some editors as to the soundness of New Deal policies in 1935. The number of opposition editors increased and in 1936 it was generally said that the President had only about one half of the newspapers supporting him. But even then, Mr. Roosevelt continued to have exceedingly cordial relations with the corps of correspondents who report on national affairs under a Washington date line.

The Washington correspondents and columnists who found little or no fault with the New Deal began to dwindle in numbers eventually. Now, as a guess, I would say that probably only about one-fourth of the five or six hundred writers believe heart-and-soul with New Deal policies. This does not mean that those who observe weaknesses or vulnerable points in the New Deal do not write their commendation when they believe it is due. The difference is that they are no longer completely "sold" on New Deal statements or propaganda without digging further into every situation. As a result, obviously, attention is directed daily to those weaknesses, as well as the strong points, of the New Deal; the news is no longer all ballyhoo for the New Deal.

Another result is that White House press conferences no longer are the jovial, carefree meetings filled with laughter, good-natured jibes and exchanges, friendly shots back and forth between the President and the correspondents. On a number of occasions, quite the contrary has been true. The President has spoken some very harsh words now and then about news dispatches from Washington by certain writers. He has not minced words when some Republican writer, like Mark Sullivan of the New York Herald Tribune syndicate, for instance, wrote his observations of a critical nature. Altogether, I believe it can be said that the newspaper criticism at times has got under the President's skin and has made him quite irascible and squeamish. I do not mean to say that this condition obtains every time the President meets with the press, but it has happened with greater and greater frequency of late that Mr. Roosevelt has found fault with what the correspondents were writing.

Such things, generally, are not written. Newspaper men usually do not inject themselves into rows, nor do they consider that they are more than the eyes and ears for their readers. That is to say, they consider their work impersonal and for the reason that it is impersonal seldom take the public into their confidences on matters that seem to them to be purely personal in nature.

In the last two weeks, however, the differences between the President and his advisors, on the one hand, and the editors throughout the country and their Washington correspondents, on the other hand, at last have been brought into the open. That is, and I believe this is a fair statement, Mr. Roosevelt has brought the row into the open.

The match seems to have been touched to the dynamite by Mr. Roosevelt at a recent "off the record" session which he held with the members of the Managing Editors' society. The society meets annually in Washington and always during their stay, they are invited to a White House meeting. In the past, such meetings have promoted a better understanding between the editors and the administration, but the last session appears to have done exactly the opposite.

It is not permissible to disclose what goes on in those meetings and, not having been present, I cannot vouch for details of the recent meeting. I know, however, that heretofore the editors came away always feeling that benefits of the meeting had been important. At the last meeting, according to common understanding around Washington, the discussion was heated. The President's remarks to the editors must have been vicious. In any event, there were few of the editors came away in a good humor. Indeed, at a breakfast of the society the next morning, one managing editor challenged his colleagues with the question: "Are we mice or are we men?"

Again asserting my inability to vouch for all of the statements that have deluged Washington since the meeting, I know that many of the editors were "red headed" or "hot under the collar" or whatever your favorite expression may be. And well they may have been if it is true that the President told them they had no genuine knowledge of public sentiment in their several communities, nor did they have any real influence. But the crowning shot, according to report, was a pointed inference that the President better understood what the country needed than the editors.

Immediately thereafter the American Newspaper Publishers association, at its New York meeting, had before it a report calling for the elimination of politics and politicians from control of the radio or the press. The report cited Mr. Roosevelt's frequent use of the airplanes for his "fireside chats," and it added:

"The inescapable task of the American press is to guard against any encroachment upon American democracy by the federal government with radio as the instrument of political power."

That incident, of course, was not ignored in Washington. While there was no word from the White House, the newspapers were the target for an intemperate speech by Sen. Sherman Minton of Indiana. Senator Minton has been a New Deal mouthpiece through the last year and only a few persons believed that he was speaking his own views. Most observers thought he was doing a "Charley McCarthy" for those in the New Deal who needed a ventriloquist and a forum then and there to get their views printed.

Mr. Minton jumped all over the newspapers. None of them would print the New Deal side, he asserted; none would be fair. They simply are awful things, these newspapers. The report of the newspaper publishers, mentioned above, was described by the senator as "an exhibition of unmitigated gall." Some newspapers were accused of "spewing out their propaganda" against the New Deal and he charged that the New Deal "simply can not get its side of the story printed."

The senator certainly got his side of the case printed for the metropolitan dailies reaching Washington gave him vast space—and also they subsequently gave him editorial attention. Senators on the floor listened to Senator Minton, too, but only Senator Norris of Nebraska and Schwellenbach of Washington took any notice. Senator Schwellenbach felt impelled to make a few well-chosen remarks about the way the press has treated the New Dealers, including himself.

And, I almost forgot about it! Senator Minton introduced a bill that would send an editor or reporter to jail if they printed any information which they knew to be incorrect. The guilty persons could be fined many thousands of dollars, too, under the Minton bill. I guess the reason I almost forgot about the Minton bill to punish editors was because nobody took it seriously, least of all the colleagues of Senator Minton in the senate. It will go into a committee pigeonhole and will never be heard of again.

Involvement of radio and its control by the federal government in the "freedom of speech" battle Irked by Radio Policy calls to mind that there has been much complaint lately concerning the federal communications commission. That agency has supreme authority over the radio stations of the country. They cannot operate without a license. The law which set up the commission gave authority to license stations for three years, but as a matter of practice the commission never has issued a license to any station for a period longer than six months. In consequence, every station owner and operator has to come into the commission twice a year and file an application for renewal of its right to operate.

The complaint is that the broadcasting industry is running on a six-months' basis, uncertain at all times about its future status. Twice a year, therefore, any station owner has to make a guess whether his investment is worth anything. One of the charges against this practice, a charge hurled by David Sarnoff, president of the Radio Corporation of America, was that the short-period licensing practice "leaves the door open for indirect and insidious censorship." The charge, of course, considers the possibilities of underhanded activity that always are available to an individual in public office.

Men of the Mounted

G. Elliott-Nightingale

"SOAPY SMITH" CHANGES HIS MIND

A MORE notorious political racketeer never lived than "Soapy" Smith. For years he and his gangsters did just as they please up and down the west coast, and when "Soapy" decided to hit for the Yukon during the historically famous gold rush, he took most of his gang of ruffians, cut-throats and robbers with him. Almost overnight "Soapy" gained complete control of Skagway, and soon the town was wide open multiplied by ten.

Skagway's streets became battlefields where provoked and unprovoked gunfights occurred daily as some of "Soapy's" ruffians robbed and plundered outgoing, well-heeled goldrushers and incoming goldseekers alike. At night, raucous voices singing lewd and filthy songs were augmented by cries of "murder" from the street. Might was right in every sense of the word, meanwhile all sorts of gyp-artists, card sharps, confidence men, and shell-game crooks robbed and plundered right and left, keeping out of trouble because "Soapy," the Big Boss, had arranged the police and judiciary to suit himself.

"Soapy" and his lieutenants planned and executed hundreds of robberies and swindling schemes, growing richer and more powerful the while. Then came news the Northwest Mounted Police were about to escort about $200,000 in notes and gold from Lake Bennett post, to Victoria, British Columbia, via the port at Skagway. Surely this was too juicy a plum for "Soapy" and his gang to miss. Moreover, up to this time, both "Soapy" and his henchmen had balked at any "job" that might make them step into Canadian territory. Even the reputedly daring "Soapy" entertained a healthy respect for the Men of the Mounted.

Here was a job they could pull right on American soil where, by rights, the Men of the Mounted had no business. And so "Soapy" and his brain-trust sat down and schemed, planned and arranged for every emergency. This was to be the job of the decade. "Soapy" organized an army of 100 well-armed men, engaged boats, and planted scouts here and there; the commissioner of the Yukon territory bade good-by, and good luck, to three Men of the Mounted, Inspector Wood and two constables. Their load consisted of their own personal kits, and the $200,000.

After many anxious miles during which the three Men of the Mounted followed the Skagway trail, and nodded the time of day with furtive-eyed rascals who were evidently "Soapy's" scouts, Inspector Wood and his men arrived at Dyea where they immediately boarded a waiting rowboat and were soon rowing out across the bay. Halfway across several well-armed men in a rather large rowboat manned by half a dozen stout-muscled oarsmen, did their best to intimidate the Northwest Mounted and made several attempts to bring the two boats into a collision. Inspector Wood, handling the steering oar, warned the ruffians to keep their distance or he would fire upon them, and, thus arguing back and forth, the two boats finally crossed the bay without any shootings or drownings. Upon arrival at the wharf, however, Inspector Wood and his men received a rough and tumble reception from almost a hundred ruffians lined up and ready for the big robbery. As the Men of the Mounted stepped to the wharf carrying their $200,000 they were tripped and jostled and pushed about hither and yon as they tried to make their way toward a small steamer that lay alongside awaiting their coming. Kicked and pushed and tripped and otherwise held up and delayed, things began to look really serious. The great robbery was imminent. And then, just when it seemed that the Men of the Mounted were about to be smothered by the mob, the captain aboard the steamer tooted the vessel's horn, and instantly a score of armed members of the Royal naval reserve were over the side and down among "Soapy's" gang. In no time the Men of the Mounted and their $200,000 were snatched from the mob and were aboard the steamer.

"Soapy" Smith, surrounded by at least a score of his most trusted gunmen, had witnessed the whole show from the deck of a tug that was "treading water" nearby. Although he had seen his best plans go haywire, he was still smiling or sneering, when he opened up conversation with Inspector Wood.

"Like ter have yer stay 'round Skagway a day er two, 'Spector,'" said "Soapy," "it's a mighty nice town . . . y'kin have any'ting yer want . . . Name it . . . an' it's yores. How 'bout it? 'Spector?"

"Thank you, Mr. Smith," the inspector replied, coolly, "but I must be about my business. I'd advise you to keep off Canadian territory in the future, as you have done, so very well, in the past. Good afternoon, sir."

My Friend Joseph

Lillian Oakley

WNU Service.

THOUGH a strong wind was blowing, driving sheets of rain across my front yard, I wasn't surprised to see Joseph, my little seven-year-old neighbor, making his way up the front walk. Yesterday was my birthday and he was here when the postman brought me a five-pound box of candy, and Joseph has a weakness for good chocolates.

He comes puffing in and while he sheds his waterproof coat he looks around for the candy. But all the candy spots are vacant. My bonbon resistance is below normal on bad days and I have put all the sweets away and resolved not to bring them out for a week. But now from past experience I know that without once asking me for any candy Joseph will soon have me bringing out my five-pound box and urging him to take all he wants. He has an indirect method all his own that never conflicts with any of the rules of etiquette and always gets him what he wants.

He pulls a low stool in front of mine, looks up at me and says, "Guess who I'd be if I could be anybody I wanted to be?"

This is easy for he always wants to be Tarzan or Dizzy Dean. But I'm all wrong.

"Not today," he says with emphasis, "today I'd be 'Laddin An' His Lamp."

"And guess what's the first thing I'd tell that old genie to do after I rubbed my lamp?"

This isn't really meant to be a question so I simply sit still and look interested.

"I'd tell him to build my mother the finest house in town an' furnish it full of the finest furniture in town an' have a hot supper on the table ready for her when she got home from work. And I'd make him give me some money an' I'd go down town an' pay all of her bills an' put 'em on the table by her plate." He finishes exultantly.

Joseph has no father and the bills that have to be paid at the end of every month hang heavy over his head.

He clasps both little hands around one knee and rocks himself backwards and forwards on the stool and smiles over this happy surprise for his mother. Then he looks around at me as if afraid I am feeling neglected.

"Then," he says with enthusiasm, "I'd rub my lamp an' when that old genie came I'd tell him to bring me a motorcycle just like the road cops ride only littler, an' a police uniform an' a machine gun that could shoot forever an' a five-pound box of candy just like the one you got for your birthday yesterday. And," he adds with a smile that shows all of his dimples, "I'd bring you down about half of the candy."

The object of his visit has been attained. And he leaves with his pockets full of my birthday chocolates, the rain having let up somewhat.

"What Knows He of England Who Only England Knows?"

"Even after months in England my wife sometimes had to call upon the housemaid to translate some item in the laundry list, or to interpret between her and the grocery boy," declares Mr. Harry A. Franck, the irrepressible globe-trotter, in "Footloose in the British Isles." "In England a 'vest' is an undershirt, not a waistcoat. 'Suspenders' are garters, and 'braces' are suspenders. A child's underwaist is a 'bodice,' while rubber boots are 'Wellingtons.' The word 'sweater' still strikes many of the English as a trifle low-class and odoriferous; they call it a 'jersey,' 'jumper,' 'pullover,' or 'cardigan.'"

Name Is Poetry

It seemed curious that any place should be named "Llanfairpwllgwyngyllgogerychwyrndrobwllllyndysillioogoch." Yet a little Welsh village bears this 58-lettered name. It is a locality of charm and beauty. Llan is "church," Fair is "of Mary," Pwll Gwyngyll is "the pool of White hazels," Gogery is "rather near," while Chwyrn Drobwl is "the swift whirlpool," and Tysilio gogo goch is "of Tysilio of the red cave." Is it not therefore suggestive of romance and beauty enough to visit the village of the Church of St. Mary by the Pool of White hazels near the swift whirlpool of St. Tysilio's Church of the Red Cave?—Detroit News.

DEATH WRITES "30" FOR B. I. PUBLISHER

The Blue Island city council, headed by Mayor John Hart, as well as countless individuals and organization representatives from the south suburban area, viewed the body as it lay in state Sunday and Monday at the chapel.

Publishers from towns in this area, many of whom knew Mr. Voip "Tens of years", drove from a distance to pay their final respects.

Born in Blue Island

John H. Voip was born in Blue Island, Ill., on April 23, 1868, the son of Henry and Margaret (nee Hensel) Voip. He spent his early boyhood on the southside of the village. He was educated in the local schools and at the early age of 14, launched into the printing business, working as a helper in the old standard office located Western avenue near New street and owned by Mr. Pope. In 1888 he became a partner in the business. In March 1891 he was united in marriage to Viola Haas. In 1894, Mr. Voip sold his interest in the Standard and in the same year began printing and publishing the Saturday Sun in his own printing plant at 232 Vermont St., in the building until lately occupied by the Blue Island Savings and Loan association, later moving into the log cabin which was located at 300 Vermont street.

The Standard and Sun were consolidated in 1918, with Mr. Voip as head of the organization which position he held until his death. He was also president of the Blue Island Publishing Corporation and the Blue Island Winsett Finance Co. He was a charter member of the Blue Island Lions club and many other local, fraternal and civic organizations. He founded the Ideal Radio Cabinet Company in 1923. He was chairman of the Blue Island Centennial Committee.

Vacation Trip

Mr. Voip was on a vacation trip in Miami, Florida, accompanied by his wife when he was stricken on February 22, 1938. He apparently was on the road to recovery and insisted on coming home. They returned to Blue Island on April 3rd and on Saturday April 23, he celebrated his 70th birthday with his family. On May 2nd he went to St. Francis hospital where he quietly passed away on Saturday May 7, at nine a. m.

Mr. Voip is survived by his widow and four sons, Harold, Stanley, Ivan and Wesley; one daughter Alice; two sisters, Mrs. John Reichert and Mrs. Anna Haas all of Blue Island and a host of other relatives, business associates and friends. A son Elmer preceded his father in death when he met an untimely death in 1910.

Riverview Park Opens Wed., May 18th

Looking forward to one of the greatest seasons of its history, Riverview will stage its 35th annual opening on Wednesday May 18.

Hundreds of workmen—painters, carpenters, landscape gardeners, mechanics and engineers—are now busy setting the scene. George A.
Schmidt, president of Riverview, promises, "This year the park will be more beautiful than ever before, and, besides, will offer a galaxy of new attractions in addition to the many old favorites.

Ever since the park closed last September a gigantic rebuilding and modernizing program has been in ual will be used. This is a very impressive ceremony in which the oath is made and the charter and colors are presented to the new Orland Park Troop.

The installing troop is a crack squad of advanced Scouts and various items of scouting will be demonstrated. The public is invited and no charge is made.

Roland Bradley will address the gathering after the installation. The Orland Park Post American Legion is sponsoring the Orland Park Boy Scout troop.

High Finance

High finance is merely a popular term applied to the large-scale promotion of financial ventures which yield enormous profits to the pro-motors, yet evade civil or criminal liabilities

You get your oil

FREE

(UP TO THE FULL MARK)

if I forget to check it

IT'S MIGHTY IMPORTANT that you always have enough oil in your engine. If you don't, you're headed for trouble.

To save you grief, all of us
Shell dealers listed below make you this proposition:

Drive into one of our stations. If we don't check your oil—AUTOMATICALLY—
we'll bring your oil level right up to the full mark FREE OF CHARGE.

What's more we'll put in Golden Shell Oil—the oil that's especially made to reduce the wear of stop-and-go driving.
Because it's fast-flowing, this oil leaps to every moving engine part the instant you step on the starter. And it's tough, too, so it won't break down under the heat of steady running. In fact—

There's no finer oil at any price than Golden Shell.
